Public Trustee supports local seniors to showcase their talent

Public Trustee of Queensland, Peter Carne is encouraging seniors aged 55+ to audition for the latest Senior Superstar amateur talent competition being held on the Sunshine Coast during October and November

Speaking from the new Public Trustee Sunshine Coast Office, Peter Carne said the Office had been supporting Senior Superstar for two years now and the standard of competition is growing higher each year.

“Senior Superstar is a great way for older people to showcase their talents, I am always impressed with the diverse range of acts and the quality of performances,” Mr Carne said.

“For many competitors Senior Superstar has brought them a new lease of life, as they prepare for their performances.

“Audiences of all ages gain enjoyment from the concerts and I am always pleased to see so many people leave these events with smiles on their faces.

“Senior Superstar is a wonderful way for people of all ages to get together. There is a real feeling of community and family at the performances. Some retirement villages even bus their residents to the all the heats and the grand final.

“I encourage local seniors to audition for the competition or simply come and be a part of the audience.

“Sponsoring Senior Superstar is a worthwhile way for The Public Trustee to give back the Sunshine Coast community. We wish all the talented performers taking part every success,” Mr Carne said.
